Antiques and Pictures in a Sale Exhibition

Mrs. E. Henry Harriman has gone to Five Collections United for Dispersal at American Art Galleries.

> Five art collections have been united into one at the American Art Association, including pictures, entique Oriental porcelains, European art objects and rare rugs and furniture. The exhibition is replete with interest and entertainment for the amateur, and is so extensive that the auction will extend from March 17 to March 20 inclusive.

The paintings include five peaceful landscapes by the famous George Inness, but in spite of that fact there are so many pictures of military life that the atmosphere of the galleries seems decidedly warlike at times. One of these is by a painter who once roused a great a millinery establishment in West Forty consistion in America with his war seventh etreet. Mrs. Thornton was enpaintings-Vassili Verestchagin, the Russian. The present work is in his well known style and shows a Cozaack sentinel upon a hillock guarding the Danube. It is dramatic, as usual, and on either side of the soldier are the curious rush lights to be lit on the approach of the enemy at night.

Two attacking parties in the French army are shown by Grolleron and esting picture of the United States Cavalry by R. F. Zogbaum. which comes from the Mrs. Mary Burton Harrison and other estates, is mostly of palatial description. There are deep sofas and chairs cushioned in tapestries, a sixteenth century Spanish milvor reliquary, a pair of Russian bronze altar pieces, a figure of the Virgin carved from wood by a sixteenth century French sculpter, and inlaid and painted chests of drawers, four post beds, cheval mirrors, tables and desks. A carved oak cabinet and a beautifully carved chest, are both of French workmanship and from the celebrated Gavet ollection of Paris

Florence, and a Roman triumph by a Paduan artist. The rugs include weavings from Gheoldes, Saraband, Daghestan. Feraghan and other famous looms The Oriental art collection is owned by Edward H. Drew of Boston, and the Rudolph E. Schirmer estate, of New York. It includes many carved netalikes, inros, and small carvings in livery. The boxes in lacquer are embellished with lovely designs, and the workmanship is asjonishing. The porcelains in blue and white, the deborated pieces, and the brilliant single color vases alike repay study. There are some of the rare ex-blood and apple green glanes to be noted, as well as 57 A A The European art objects are for the

BONNIE THORNTON. ACTRESS. IS DEAD

Was Wife of James Thornton, Vaudeville Player.

Bonnie Thornton, who with her husband, James, formed one of the first teams engaged by B. F. Keith when he began his career as a vaudeville mana-ger, died last night at Bellevue Hospital. She was taken to the hospital Thursday afternoon from the Hotel Argonne, 155

West Forty-seventh street.
The Thorntons were both of New England stock. At the age of 16 Mrs. Thornton made her first apearance on the stage at Tony Pastor's. It was while singing there that she met Jim Thornton and they were married a few weeks later. For several years they appeared together in variety theatres, but soon after variety became "vaudeville" Miss Thornton quit the stage for a time, but always travelled with her husband when he was on tour. In their domestic life they were inseparable.

Bonnie Thornton's greatest hits were with songs written by her husband, some of which are still well remembered. Her last stage appearance was at the Palace Theatre several months ago with her husband in a sketch based on the old variety days. Recently she acquired tered at the hospital as 48 years of age.
